“When I started making the series I intended to continue each day for a year – now I see no reason to stop.”

Ghislaine Howard

Imperial War Museum North presents an intimate but powerful display of a year’s worth of daily paintings by the critically acclaimed Derbyshire artist and 2008 Woman of the Year, Ghislaine Howard. Every day since October 2006 Ghislaine has set aside time to produce a single 8 x 6 inch painting responding to a news image featured in The Guardian newspaper as it arrives through her door. Brought together for the first time on public display and reflecting Imperial War Museum North’s focus on how war has shaped and continues to shape peoples lives, 365 questions whether we are over exposed to images of conflict, and if the way images are produced and published changes our way of looking at them.
